

The Lost Zazie Productions Song - "Pineal Cleft (Ver. -7)"

Known only in cryptic fragments, "Pineal Cleft (Ver. -7)" is the alleged seventh reversed iteration of a never-publicly-released Zazie Productions piano piece. Referenced only in malformed comment chains, and never included in any official Zazie release, it supposedly emerged during the Stutter to Stammer sessions. The original piece used an electrode-modulated felt piano and was processed with a custom Max/MSP patch named NOCTILUCA-FR4CTAL. File evidence exists under the name 'PINEAL_CLEFT_V-7_revmix.apex' in a leaked RAR archive using the signature NO-GOD-BUT-FORM. A single spectrogram reveals Morse code pulses: 'ZAZIE IS ASLEEP IN THE CLEFT'. Witnesses to a 2021 Asheville Subsonic Residency claim it was played live in an unlisted midnight set and described it as 'a womb made of sinewaves... a brain peeling'. Attempts to reconstruct it are said to induce dreams of drowning in glass.

"Tape for Mirabel (Mirror Bloom Mix)" - A tape-loop ambient piece allegedly composed for a friend in hospice, only documented through a single Polaroid showing a TASCAM unit labeled 'MIRABEL-FEB99'. Said to use reversed clarinet samples from Zazie's early high school recordings. A user on the WFMU archives claimed to have heard a bootlegged version on a CDr left anonymously at a used bookstore in Durham, NC.

"Jellydrone v2.3b [Prismatic Drift]" - A glitchscape work-in-progress leaked from a crashed Ableton project file. Identifiable only through RAM image logs uploaded by a sysadmin on the now-defunct Backmasking.ru forum. One 16-second clip remains, with time-stretched dolphin samples and microtonal bells originally sourced from Zazie's 2007 'Pocket Temple' sample pack.

"mOrning-dust.flx" - A lost experimental piece intended as a meditation on synthetic grief. Allegedly used filtered baby monitor audio, granulated breaths, and detuned train whistles. Rumors say Zazie deleted it after a 'visceral autonomic response'. The title surfaced in a note during the @WellMeaningNeurotypicals ARG, hinting it may have never existed outside a lucid dream experiment.

"Lachrymotor Sketch 4C" - Referenced in a soundcheck list for Zazie's 2020 Black Mountain College installation. Never recorded, but mentioned in a tech sheet for a 4-channel reverb chamber designed to simulate 'emotional tremor decay'. One partial MIDI file was found in a GitHub commit labeled 'abortive hauntologies' and removed within 6 hours.

"Corvine Obelisk (draft)" - Supposedly an 18-minute drone piece recorded in a chapel using a gutted Hammond B3, transduced through ceramic bones. Mentioned in passing in an interview Zazie gave in 2022: 'The obelisk didn't sound right. Too clean. Too reverent.' No other record remains.

"Anamnesis .vocaltest" - A raw vocal-only file, referenced in a fan spreadsheet of unreleased Zazie stems. Speculated to be a pre-lyrical version of 'Cortex Ribbon'. A former collaborator said it was 'a nursery rhyme filtered through a dead modem', recorded in a single take during a fever-induced improvisation.

"Vellum Code (de-inked)" - Allegedly the soundtrack for a short film by Zazie now lost due to a failed Bitrot recovery attempt. A still from the film shows a faceless archivist scanning blank manuscripts. Audio reconstructions have attempted to simulate its 'paper-folded silence'.

"Kreepanth Karpentry OST (early prototype)" - Composed for an abandoned surrealist 2D game. Zazie shared a screenshot in 2018 on a now-deleted Tumblr. Only MIDI fragments survive, including a theme labeled 'angry ladder fight' and another in 17/4 time titled 'polycradle descent'.
